THE South-

Carolina GAZETTE.

November 18, 1751. [NUMB. 914.]

BOSTON, August 26.

AS the Public have lately been entertained with the Account of an Island lately discovered, of which Capt. Rodney, Governor of Newfoundland went to look for, we cannot but think the following Extract from Otton's Journal, may be an agreeable Amusement to many of our Readers. It was given by the Capt. to a Master of a Vessel just arrived here from London, of whom we have obtained it.

March 4, 1748-9. At two in the Afternoon made Land, which bore N. E. seven Leagues Distance by Estimation; at five tack'd, being about three Leagues from said Island, Wind E. S. E. Lat. per observation 49 40, Long. 24 30 from the Lizard. This Island stretches N. W. and S. E. about five Leagues long, and about one Mile wide: On the South side five Vallies, and a great number of Birds. March 5 said Island bore N. three Leagues, N. W. a Reef of Rocks three Miles. This Day a Ships Mast came along-side. On the South Point of said Island is a small marshy Island.——A Copy of my Journal on board the Snow St. Paul, of London, bound from South-Carolina to London.

William Otton, Commander.

Captain Otton thought he saw a Tent on the Island, and would have gone ashore, but had unfortunately stove his Boat some Time before.

London, August 17. Orders are given out for the house of peers, and also for the house of commons, to have new furniture against the meeting of both houses of parliament for the dispatch of business; which, we hear, will be on the 25th of November next.

London, August 29. Some private letters from Copenhagen mention, that a settlement on the Island of Majador, on the coast of Africa, is the first step towards the execution of a new plan, which it is thought will have a great effect in extending the trade of the people of Denmark.

The fleet of the society's busses are returned from Shetland to Southwold (convoy'd by Capt. Wyatt of the Vulture Sloop); and are preparing for the Yarmouth fishery.

The success our ships have met with this year in the Whale fishery, has encouraged a number to be adventurers for the next season, when, no doubt, we shall make a considerable figure, if carry'd on with spirit. It is much to be wonder'd, that the people of England should so long neglect this valuable branch of trade; more especially, as it may be said, without exaggeration, that there is at least ten times the quantity of whalebone used by the women of England than by the same number in any other country.
